GERMAN SHIPS, INTERNED, GET INTO OPEN SEA

Bahrenfeld and Turpin Successful in Escaping from South America.

THIRD VESSEL FAILS

Asuncion Driven Back by Shots from Warships at Para.

INVESTIGATION IS ORDERED

Presumed Teuton Steamers Will Be Fitted Out as Commerce Raiders in the Near Future.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald. Buenos Aires, Feb. 12.—Two interned German steamships escaped from South American ports today and are now at sea, according to current reports, with ample quantities of coal by Germans in South America. Direct evidence of the purpose behind their escapes is lacking, but it is presumed here that the vessels will attempt to join other German ships and, after being equipped, will be used for commerce raiding.

The two vessels are the Bahrenfeld, which was interned at Buenos Aires, and the Turpin, interned at the Chilean port of Punta Arenas, in the Strait of Magellan.

Third Ship Caught. While the Bahrenfeld and the Turpin were successful in getting to sea, dispatches from Rio de Janeiro tell of the capture of a similar attempt by the German steamship Asuncion, interned at Para.

The Asuncion pursued different tactics from the two vessels which succeeded. Her commander asked for and received permission to move his vessel to a pier for the purpose of taking on a supply of fresh water. The vessel, getting up steam ostensibly for the short move to the pier, turned and made for the open sea.

The Brazilian cruiser Republic and the auxiliary vessel Toffe were in the harbor on guard, and when the Asuncion's purpose was manifest fired blank shots to halt her.

Warships Open Fire. The German vessel paid no attention to these warnings and the two Brazilian ships opened fire with projectiles. Thereupon the Asuncion stopped. On being overtaken her commander explained that he had no intention of escaping. The vessel was brought back to the harbor. The government has begun an investigation.

The Bahrenfeld, formerly the Luxor, is a vessel of 2,207 tons. She was built at Newcastle, England, in 1906. The Turpin, formerly the Freiburg, registers 2,300 tons. She was built at West Hartlepool, England, in 1900. The Asuncion is a vessel of 2,013 tons, owned by the Hamburg South American Steamship Company. She was built at Hamburg in 1904.

Wilson Inspects Fortress Monroe

President and Mrs. Wilson Will Sail Today, but Keep Their Program Secret.

Special to The Washington Herald. Newport News, Va., Feb. 12.—President and Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by Dr. Cary T. Grayson, the President's physician, and two secret service men, arrived here this afternoon aboard the yacht Mayflower.

After spending an hour inspecting Fortress Monroe, they boarded a motor launch and witnessed the launching of the Standard Oil Company's steamer Charles Pratt at the Newport News shipyard. Going ashore at Old Point Comfort, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson spent an hour talking and again boarded the Mayflower.

It is expected the party will sail again tomorrow afternoon about 5 o'clock. Their program for tomorrow was kept secret.

The visit to Fortress Monroe was purely informal at the request of the President. The party viewed the fortifications unattended, except by a commandant, Col. Haynes. Because the Presidential flag was not displayed when the Mayflower entered the roads no salute was fired.

Two Steamers Reported Sunk; One Belgian, One Norwegian

London, Feb. 12.—The Belgian steamship Aduatic, of 2,221 tons, has been sunk. Two of the crew were lost, according to the dispatch to Lloyds reporting the disaster. The Aduatic formerly was under Austrian registry.

The Norwegian steamer Alabama also has been sunk, says a Lloyds' report. The crew was picked up by the Norwegian steamer Balzac.

Though no details are given, it is assumed that the vessels were victims of submarines.

BERNARD SHAW TALKS ON WAR

Declares It Is Time for a Discussion of Terms to End Killing.

DECRIES HELPLESSNESS OF THE "INTELLIGENTIA"

Declares Simple Fight for What Can Be Grabbed Will Not Pay Any Belligerent.

By GEORGE BERNARD SHAW. Special Cable to The Washington Herald. London, Feb. 12.—Perhaps the grimmest feature of this war, as of all wars, is the helplessness of the intelligentia. In vain do we play at being romantic school boys, stupefying ourselves with quixotic reveries, lashing ourselves into virtuous indignation and calling the clay we were born on our mother.

We loathe war as an abomination forced on us by a crude and corrupt people. Long after we have normally outgrown it, being able to suppress it, we would like to obtain control of it sufficiently to dictate its aims and define its limits. But though we write most intelligent, interesting and suggestive articles, we might as well discharge pop-guns. If it were not for the attacks we make on one another, our utterances would pass without notice. They remain, in any case, without effect. Intelligence is not organized; everything else is, more or less. For my part I wish I knew what program the journalistic intelligentia, of which I am not a particularly humble member, are to support. We have no use for flap-doodle, but we will stand by any reasonable and adequate policy.

Disarmament Policies. There is the policy of dismembering Germany by detaching Bohemia as an independent national state, of detaching Poland from our ally, Russia, similarly, and of dismembering Austria by giving Bohemia and Herzegovina to Serbia and of splitting the dual monarchy into two single republics (for there is really no use in setting up new states if they are all to have thrones occupied by Hohenzollern or Hapsburg cadets) thereby reducing pan-Germany to reasonable Germany. Alternately there is the program of inviting the belligerents to put their cards on the table, or rather, of ceasing to pretend that the cards are not already in full view of all people with eyes in their heads, and confessing that, as the imminence of bankruptcy, both vital and pecuniary, threatens to make short work of paper schemes of European reconstruction by unlimited trinitro-toluene and reciprocal annihilation, the sooner we all resort to judicial settlement the better.

Honor has now been satisfied by displays of splendid heroism in which the Maori shares the laurels of the Magyar and the Prussian guard enters Valhalla with the Dublin fusiliers.

Need to Discuss Terms. In the west we have demonstrated for eighteen months what happens when an irresistible force encounters immovable obstacles, and in the east we have achieved a sensational victory for the one power we were all agreed in despising as negligible, to wit, the Sick Man, alias the Ottoman empire (solemnly guaranteed by treaty); after which reduction to absurdity of the whole business of modern war, it is extremely desirable in the interests of civilization that we should begin to discuss the terms on which we are prepared to stop killing one another, it being understood that we are all to return victoriously from the congress bearing peace with honor to our respective electorates.

These two programs seem to me to exhaust the alternatives to a simple fight for what the combatants can grab, which would not pay any of us.

But Mr. Asquith may have a tertium quid quid up his sleeve, in which case I wish we knew what it is.

DEFENSE FUND GAMBLE BASIS

Baxter, Dropped by National Society, Got Percentage of Donations.

STARTED FOR 25 PER CENT BUT WAS RAISED TO 50

Man Who Was Organizing and Financial Secretary Bares Secrets of Body's Inside Workings.

New York, Feb. 12.—The Evening Post today published the following: Some of the inside details of the campaign of the American Defense Society for funds and support were revealed today by George M. Baxter, who was dismissed recently from his position as organizing and financial secretary of the society, after the publication of a story reflecting upon his character. It was said in the story that Baxter had been a member of the "We Boys" crowd, which was prominent some years ago in uptown hotels. A meeting of the trustees of the society was hurriedly called, and Baxter was summarily dropped.

Of more interest than Baxter's defense of his character is the story of the society's inner workings. It appears that Baxter organized the appeals for funds on a percentage basis, and that he was successful in raising many thousands of dollars.

Constant Bickerings. There were constant bickerings among the backers of the society in regard to policies, politics and funds. Mr. Baxter's statement, which is in the form of an open letter to the trustees of the society, is, in part, as follows:

"When I approached you in August last with a proposition to take over the work of raising funds for the American Defense Society, Inc., and to finance myself and my staff throughout, assuming personally all risk of loss, and leaving the society free of any moneyed obligation in connection with such a department, you accepted willingly—more gladly, I received from me references which you have frequently declared were entirely satisfactory, and we entered upon a tentative agreement for a trial period on a basis of 25 per cent commissions.

Raised to 50 Per Cent. "Later, when I had proved to you the practicability of my plans, and a national campaign for financial support had begun, we entered into a contract providing that my management of field secretaries, etc., should continue until December 31, 1916, and that my commission should be raised to 50 per cent—out of which I was to pay all telegraph and telephone bills, all salaries and commissions to field secretaries, canvassers and others whom I employed; that I should furnish my own office (which I already had), and pay all other costs incident to my department—which you chose to treat as a branch, or chapter, of the national organization.

The bridegroom appealed to police of the Ninth precinct and later told his story at police headquarters.

Two Children Burn to Death

Mother Risks Own Life to Save Third Child, an Infant.

Special to The Washington Herald. Havre de Grace, Md., Feb. 12.—The death this morning in the Havre de Grace Hospital of George Curry, 5 years old, made the second life lost in a fire that destroyed the Curry home yesterday at Lapidum. Last night Margaret, the 8-year-old sister of George, died in the same institution from burns.

A third child, an infant, was saved from death by its mother, who dashed through flames and smoke to where it was sleeping on the second floor and brought it to safety.

Mrs. Curry left Margaret and George on the ground floor of the farmhouse while she went to a nearby spring for water. While she was drawing the water she heard the screams of the two children and turned to see smoke pouring from the windows on the ground floor.

Rushing to the house, she found the parlor a mass of flames. As she stepped in, a negro, who worked as a servant about the house, stumbled through the doorway with the two burned children.

POLICE SEEK LOST BRIDE

Mrs. Myers, Five Days Wedded, Disappears While Husband Makes Purchases.

CUMBERLAND CLERK LOSES WIFE AT UNION STATION

Bridegroom Calls on Police for Assistance—Couple Were Spending Honeymoon Here.

Police last night were asked to search for Mrs. Kathryn Myers, 22, of Cumberland, Md., a bride of five days, who disappeared from the concourse of the Union Station yesterday while her husband was purchasing postal cards. The couple were preparing to return to their home when the bride vanished.

The husband is Charles Lawrence Myers, 22, a clerk in a Cumberland store. They were married Tuesday in Cumberland and came to Washington on their honeymoon, stopping at 106 C street northeast.

The newlyweds had gone to Union Station about 3 o'clock to catch a train for their home when Myers thought it a good scheme to buy a few postal photographs of the city of their honeymoon. He left his wife sitting on a bench in the concourse. She was gone when he returned.

Mrs. Myers was a stranger in Washington. One theory given for her disappearance is that she decided to take a short walk during her husband's absence and then lost her way.

This is considered rather improbable, however, as she easily could have obtained directions for the return to the station. Myers was certain she had the address of their room here.

The bridegroom appealed to police of the Ninth precinct and later told his story at police headquarters.

"PANS" WILSON FOR POLICIES

Gov. McCall Says "Too Proud to Fight" Not Happy Phrase.

REPLY ON LUSITANIA NOT FORCEFUL, HE DECLARES

In Speech at Banquet Attended by Well-known Men, He Scores Executive.

Special to The Washington Herald. New York, Feb. 12.—"Too proud to fight" would have been a very pretty conceit in one of the minor poets. But it was hardly a happy phrase for an American President to indulge in at the moment when he should have emphatically called a foreign government to account for a gross injury and a gross affront upon a nation.

Gov. Samuel W. McCall, of Massachusetts, in the above words flayed President Wilson at the Lincoln dinner of the Republican Club tonight. The dinner was held at the Waldorf Hotel. Addresses also were made by Domicio da Gama, the Brazilian Ambassador, and Rev. S. Parks Cadman, of Brooklyn.

"After the destruction of scores of American citizens upon the Lusitania," said Gov. McCall, "the President ventured a protest. But it was deprived of the force which a manly and direct protest should have carried by the speech with which he heralded its deliverance.

Need Long Forenoon.

"Nearly a year and a half ago, a Massachusetts Republican called attention to the necessity of preparedness. The situation then was as apparent as it is today. Although Congress was not in session, no important step was taken and over a year has passed in which one international crisis has followed another.

"Although it required more than a year for the President to focus his mind on the subject so that he could see the danger, it is a matter of congratulation that he can see it today. Let us hope that he will move upon straight lines and in doing so that he does not move in opposite directions.

How He Got Presidency. "His method of reaching the presidency is well known. The literary representative of a certain school, he rode out of the wilderness upon the shoulders of Mr. George Harvey. Then, at a critical moment, he transferred himself to Mr. Bryan and thus completed the journey."

SAYS U. S. IS BEING ROBBED

Gen. Goethals States Canal Land Deals Take $17,000,000 Too Much.

SCORES JOINT COMMISSION FOR EXCESSIVE PAYMENTS

Valuations Under Treaty Disregarded and Property Should Have Brought $1,000,000, He Declares.

Mal. Gen. George W. Goethals yesterday charged that the United States is being "robbed" of between $16,000,000 and $17,000,000 through land deals in the Panama Canal Zone. He laid before the House information from the Interstate Commerce Commission showing that since 1903 this country has been called upon to pay between $17,000,000 and $18,000,000 for lands worth less than $1,000,000.

The land deals at Panama have been handled through a joint land commission, comprising two representatives of the United States, and two representatives of the Panama republic. Under the treaty between the United States and Panama, which ceded the canal zone to the United States, this joint land commission has had exclusive authority to set the land claims of private persons, whose property has been taken over in connection with the building of the canal.

Gen. Goethals told the committee that a provision in the treaty prescribing that lands should be paid for on the basis of their valuation when the treaty was consummated, had been totally disregarded and that the joint land commission had awarded vast sums for land which a few years ago was worth practically nothing.

Gen. Goethals demanded legislation which would terminate the activities of the Joint Land Commission and which would prevent it from paying enormously increased values for land or improvements.

NATION FACES GRAVE TANGLE

Decision Either Way on Status of Armed Merchantmen Will Cause Complications.

ALLIES WILL PROTEST IF U. S. CHANGES ITS RULING

Germans Feel Confident State Department Will Reverse Its Position. Decision This Week.

The State Department has received from United States Ambassador Gerard at Berlin the full text of Germany's memorandum relating to her intention, after March 1, to attack all armed enemy merchant vessels without warning.

In this memorandum Germany takes the position that armed merchant ships of a belligerent power are to be regarded as auxiliary ships of war. A similar memorandum from the Austrian government is being forwarded to Washington by Ambassador Penfield at Vienna.

The position of the United States regarding the Teutonic program will be announced this week. It is expected. Officials of the State Department are privately admitting that whichever course the President decides to take, the result is certain to lead to complications.

Informally the diplomatic representatives here of the Entente Powers have already given the State Department to understand that acquiescence by the United States in the contention of Germany that she has the right to regard armed merchant ships as war vessels, will bring forth a vigorous protest. There is even talk among the entente chancelleries here of trade reprisals against the American government.

On the other hand no secret is made of the fact in German circles that the German Foreign Office confidently expects the United States to reverse its position and admit the justice of the Teutonic decree.

Disarmament Urged.

This confidence, it is stated in these quarters, is based not only on the fact that the United States has already urged, by indignant notes to the Entente powers, that their vessels of commerce be disarmed, but gave notice of the fact in these same communications that the American government was considering the advisability of changing its rules and refusing armed merchant vessels the port privileges they are previously enjoyed.

Berlin newspapers of semi-official standing go even further and flatly insist that Count von Bernstorff has been given to understand by Secretary Lansing that the American government had decided to adopt the German viewpoint.

RUSSIANS RENEW ATTACKS.

Arrival of Czar at Front Gives Impetus to Fighting.

London, Feb. 12.—The arrival of Czar Nicholas at the front has been the signal for fresh assaults by the Russians against the German and Austro-Hungarian troops, says a dispatch from Petrograd today.

Jean Crone, or Chrones, Declared to Have Put Drug in Soup Served at Banquet to Prelate.

Special to The Washington Herald.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Jean Crone, or Chrones, a German, assistant chef at the University Club, was hunted frantically today by the police of Chicago and St. Louis on the belief expressed by club officials that he had made a deliberate attempt to poison the several hundred guests at the banquet tendered Archbishop George W. Mundelein, who came from Brooklyn only three days ago and took up his new duties at the head of the Chicago diocese.

The net for Crone was extended to St. Louis for the reason that the man came from that city four years ago.

Mrs. Francis C. Kelley, president of the Catholic Church Extension Society, was one of the most seriously affected. He had not recovered today, but appeared pale and worn to those who saw him at the University Club, of which he is a resident member.

Helped Prepare Soup.

Crone, according to Monsignor Harry J. Doherty, of the University Club, had a small part in compounding the soup which was served to the banqueters. This part consisting in making balls of sausage and pressed chicken which was used in the flavoring. It is Mr. Doherty's idea that Crone put into each of these small parcels the poison which affected those who took it and the reason that more of the diners were not affected was that the man did not have time to complete his work.

The "poison shop" in Prairie avenue, near Twenty-second street, where Crone lived, had much the appearance of the office of an old-fashioned physician. Books and bottles were everywhere, there were gas burners and retorts, and row upon row of bottles. His landlady said the walls at one time held many pictures of the roomer, but every one of these had been taken down and torn into pieces. Crone was about 25 and had an excellent education. He could speak fluently in German, English, Italian and French. There was plenty of printed matter in his room running in the anarchistic strain.

Acids Found.

A rifle and the following articles were found: Six cans of sulphuric acid. Three pints of nitro-glycerine. Quantities of arsenic. Hydrocyanic acid. Potassium cyanide. Mercuric iodide. Mercuric nitrate. Copper salts.

Among the books found were "In Memoriam, for Joe Hill, Murdered by the Authorities of Utah," "A Book of Songs of the I. W. W.," and numerous books by Emma Goldman and other writers on anarchy.

Big Men Arrayed Against Bryan

If Peace Advocate Takes the Stump, Defense Men Will Put Speakers on Trail.

New York, Feb. 12.—William Jennings Bryan's contemplated tour of the country against the national defense movement will be bitterly opposed by the conference committee on national preparedness. A group of speakers was named at a meeting today who will be ready at a moment's notice to follow in the wake of Bryan.

Hausman, representing the American Legion; Beaumont Spencer and S. S. Menken, of the National Society League; Henry Woodhouse and Alan R. Hawley, of the Aero Club of America; Henry B. Joy, of Detroit; Raymond B. Price and C. Harrison Gray, of the National Society for the Advancement of Patriotic Education; John Hays Hammond, Jr., of the American Institute of Radio Engineers; Herbert Barry, Elmer A. Sperry, and Blon J. Arnold, of Chicago, of the American Society of Aeronautic Engineers.
